A Quick Job Survey Yields a Host of Openings

Noe Employers Need Waiters, Cooks, and Fitness Trainers

By John Ferrannini

Noe Valley businesses are hiring as the year gets under way. Two restaurants with plans to open soon are among the neighborhood businesses advertising jobs.

Dave Wasem, the owner of Grand Lake Kitchen, is opening a third location of his neighborhood restaurant serving standard American fare, brunch, and cocktails in the former Mr. Digby's space at 1199 Church St. in March.

Wasem says he is "looking for all positions," including managers, servers, bartenders, food runners, kitchen managers, lead line cooks, line cooks, prep cooks, and dishwashers.

Applicants can apply by emailing noe@grandlakekitchen.com.

Peruvian restaurant Fresca Noe Valley, whose doors have been closed for three years at 3945 24th St., is remodeling to open "soon," according to a November post by co-owner Ivan Calvo-Perez.

The restaurant is looking for line cooks/cocineros to join its kitchen team. The positions pay $20 to $24 an hour, and interested applicants can apply online at Indeed or Glassdoor.com. Bartenders and servers are also needed for 30-hour-a-week jobs, and those pay $19 to $21 per hour.

YuBalance Fitness Club at 4159 24th St. is looking for a full-time personal trainer, says proprietor Shala Cox. (Call 415-796-3929.)

So too is Roar women's strength training studio, according to founder and CEO Michelle Kunkel, who noted her business is "rapidly growing."

Want to Pick Up a Walking Habit?

It's a Breeze to Find a Group, Start the Trail on Sanchez Loop

By Emily Hayes

Every Saturday morning at 10 a.m. you can see a group of neighborhood walkers making their way down the still slow Sanchez Street.

Members of the group—dubbed Noe Walks—gather at the intersection of 24th and Sanchez near the Noe Valley Town Square, then walk to 30th Street and back.

Organizer Chris Nanda started Noe Walks in 2021, when Covid-19

Resident Teaches Merchants How to Respond to ICE

Many Businesses Already Show Signs of Solidarity

By Matthew S. Bajko

With tensions rising after a fatal shooting by Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents in Minneapolis in early January, Dan Geiger decided to ramp up his efforts to educate business owners in San Francisco.

He began reaching out to merchants' groups across the city, offering free presentations on what business owners should do if ICE agents showed up at their store or restaurant.

"Everybody is freaking out about ICE," says Geiger, a semi-retired business consultant with an MBA from the Haas School of Business at UC Berkeley, a career in nonprofits such as the U.S. Green Building Council, and six years of experience on the board of the Northern California chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU).

On Jan. 13, Geiger addressed the Noe Valley Merchants and Professionals Association (NVMPA).

Geiger advised the members, "If ICE comes into a place, number one stay calm. Do not confront. Also, do not consent, unless they have a judicial warrant."

A resident of Cesar Chavez Street at Dolores Street since the late 1980s, Geiger started his campaign last fall, speaking with individual merchants in Noe Valley. He walked along Church and 24th streets handing out signs for businesses to put in their windows.

The colorful posters, made by the advocacy group Indivisible, feature a

Church Says No to St. Paul Landmark

State Law Clouds City's Efforts To Preserve Religious Sites

By Matthew S. Bajko

Efforts to add several church sites in or near Noe Valley to San Francisco's list of official landmarks are now in doubt, due to a state law that allows religious properties to be exempted from such designations.

Landmarking is a preservation tool that can give local leaders a measure of control in protecting historic structures from demolition. But not always.

In 2000, a divided California Supreme Court issued a ruling that upheld legislation enacted in 1994 which allowed religious groups to tear down noncommercial property they no longer needed or they could not afford to maintain.

Then-Justice Marvin Baxter noted that the "exemptions free the owners to use the property as they would have done had the property not been designated a historical landmark."

That legal precedent was cited by John Christian, executive director of the Archdiocese of San Francisco Real Property Support Corporation, in voicing the church's opposition last month to a proposed landmark designation for St. Paul's Catholic Church, the twin-spired jewel at 1660 Church St.

The 115-year-old church is known for its English Gothic architecture, as well as its role in the 1992 film Sister Act, starring Whoopi Goldberg.

Speaking at the Jan. 21 meeting of the San Francisco Historic Preservation Commission, Christian also objected to landmark status for the buildings of Most Holy Redeemer Roman Catholic

CRIME SNAPSHOT

A Calmer Year on Noe Valley Streets Crime Declines 21% in 2025

The streets of Noe Valley appeared to be safer in 2025 than the year before, according to data gleaned from the San Francisco Police Department’s digital map of incident reports.

Across the 10 crime categories tracked monthly by the Noe Valley Voice, police recorded 887 incidents in 2025, down from 1,122 in 2024—a decline of 20.9 percent.

Some of the sharpest drops came in categories that drive quality-of-life concerns. Burglaries of homes and commercial buildings fell to 157 incidents in 2025, down 35 percent from 243 cases in 2024. Monthly burglary totals rarely climbed above the mid-teens and dipped into single digits twice during the year.

Larceny-theft, the SFPD category that includes shoplifting, auto break-ins, and package thefts, remained the most common crime but also declined, falling nearly 9 percent, from 460 incidents in 2024 to 419 in 2025. While still elevated, larceny-theft showed fewer month-to-month spikes than the year before.

Robberies were cut in half, dropping from 16 incidents in 2024 to eight in 2025, with no reported robberies during the final five months of the year.

Other categories also trended down-

The Noe Valley Voice scraped the November 2025 data for “Noe Valley” on Dec. 7, 2025, and the December 2025 data on Jan. 6, 2026. “Noe Valley” on the digital map is bordered by 21st Street, San Jose Avenue/Guerrero, 30th Street, and Grand View Avenue/Diamond Heights Boulevard. Noe Valley Voice February 2026 ward. Motor vehicle thefts fell 44 percent, from 109 to 61 cases, and assaults declined from 32 to 26 incidents. Reports of malicious mischief, often tied to nuisance complaints, also dropped modestly.

Not all categories followed the same pattern. Fraud reports increased, rising from 40 incidents in 2024 to 49 in 2025, with noticeable spikes in May and October—a reminder that financial crimes continue to shift online and are less visible at the street level.

Overall, the data showed that crime totals in Noe Valley remained relatively steady month to month in 2025, without the pronounced surges seen the previous year—a sign of gradual stabilization rather than a single dramatic drop.

The Voice retrieved the November 2025 data for “Noe Valley” from the city’s open data portal on Dec. 7, 2025, and the December 2025 data on Jan. 6, 2026. The SFPD defines Noe Valley as the area roughly bounded by 21st Street, San Jose Avenue/Guerrero Street, 30th Street, and Grand View Avenue/Diamond Heights Boulevard.

The neighborhood is covered by two police districts, with Cesar Chavez Street forming the borderline. Mission Station (1240 Valencia St.) covers the northern and central parts of Noe Valley, while Ingleside Station (11 Sgt.

John V. Young Lane) covers Upper Noe and areas near Bernal Heights and Glen Park.

Sean Perdomo is current captain at Mission Station (email sean.perdomo@sfgov.org), and Gerald Newbeck is at the helm of Ingleside (gerald.newbeck@sfgov.org).

You may also reach Mission Station at 415-558-5400 and Ingleside at 415-404-4000. If you have an emergency, call 9-1-1.

For recurring but non-emergency problems, use 3-1-1 or the SFPD non-emergency number: 415-553-0123.

LETTERS 78 CENTS

A Pattern of Lawlessness

Editor:

Matthew Bajko's excellent article in the December 2025 Noe Valley Voice (“Can the Quake Cottage on Valley Street Be Saved?”) and the same issue’s letter to the editor by Marc Norton disclosed that a local residential real estate developer flagrantly violated the terms of permits requiring preservation of the earthquake cottage at 369 Valley St. and has received and so far complied with a stop-work order.

Far away in New York City, in 1979, developer Donald Trump agreed to preserve, remove, and donate the Art Deco friezes on the old Bonwit Teller department store building he was demolishing to build Trump Tower. Instead, he directed his workers to go out at night to jackhammer them to pieces, and later blamed it all as a mistake by his construction crew. And with a slap on the wrist for the violation, and admiration from other developers, he proceeded with Trump Tower.

Trump’s early successes breaking the law clearly emboldened his later profound lawlessness and that of the Republican Party.

May San Francisco be more effective in enforcing our laws than both New York City and this Republican Congress.

You can help Noe’s own Action-SF.com in our work this year, now an entire decade into Trump’s national governance, fighting him and Republicans in swing districts and state elections nationwide to flip the Congress, again. Godspeed.

Noe Valley Employers Are Hiring in 2026

Castro St., Roar is hiring a full-time head of team and community development, a full-time San Francisco super-intendent, a group fitness instructor, and a part-time studio support person. More information is available on Roar’s website, roarsf.com.

The Philz Coffee location at 4298 24th St. is looking for baristas. The position pays $20.50 to $21.50 an hour. Team lead Santos Arteaga says, “We’re always taking applications” and “there’s always an application for all our barista positions” at Philz.

People also can apply on Philz’ website, philzcoffee.com. The company, which was sold in August to the Los Angeles-based private equity firm Freeman Spogli & Co., also has an opening for a “Director of Digital Marketing & eCommerce,” with a starting salary of $160,000 to $170,000.

Meanwhile, Mathnasium of Noe Valley, at 3813 24th St., is offering $19.50 to $21 per hour for a qualified math instructor and mentor willing to work 10 to 20 hours per week.

Whole Foods, at 3950 24th St., is looking for an overnight grocery team member and other types of workers.

The Bar on Dolores, at 1600 Dolores St., is seeking “enthusiastic waitstaff to join our team” (see jobtoday.com). “Previous experience is a plus, but a positive attitude and willingness to learn are most important.”

Fitwell Chiropractic Sports Medicine, at 900 Noe St., is looking for part-time chiropractors, working in the pay range of $40 to $100 an hour.

An AI search of “Jobs Noe Valley” in late January also turned up a nanny job paying up to $55 an hour, a position at Noe Valley Bakery on a “fun crew [with] nice customers, free coffee, and free food daily,” and an opening for a full-time family physician at One Medical on 24th Street, with a salary range of $309,000 to $328,000.

Send those resumes. ■

Concerns About ICE Bring New Signs of Solidarity

butterfly and the words: “No Kings. No ICE. No Fear. Immigrants Are Welcome Here.”

According to the organization, displaying the placards is a way for merchants to “declare their support for their immigrant neighbors and opposition to ICE, as well as to create a private area for employees that ICE cannot legally enter without a signed judicial warrant. These are simple steps that businesses can take to protect their employees from ICE and make all immigrants feel welcome in your community.”

“I talked to a lot of store people. There was a lot of concern,” Geiger said, expressed by business owners as he passed out the anti-ICE signs. “It is important to educate people, because people don’t know what to do if ICE comes to their door.”

Anxiety Spreads Rumors

For months, rumors had been spreading that ICE agents detained employees at two eateries in Noe Valley. However, the managers at both restaurants assured the Voice no such raids occurred.

Noe Indian Cuisine manager Oli Bhupendra said the eatery, in the 4100 block of 24th Street, had not been visited by ICE but had heard via the grapevine that federal agents had arrested employees at Barney’s Gourmet Hamburgers down the street.

The manager at Barney’s said the rumor was false and the restaurant believed it had been started by a customer who mistook a dozen San Francisco sheriff deputies at the restaurant for a party last summer for ICE agents.

Both businesses have spoken to their employees about what their rights are should ICE agents show up one day, said the managers.

“We try to tell the guys in the kitchen what to do, as they don’t speak English,” said Noe Indian Cuisine manager Bhupendra.

The restaurant also has cards for the kitchen employees that list their rights and a phone number they can call should ICE pay a visit, Bhupendra said, noting there’d been an increase in anxiety in recent weeks.

“We have seen in the news that a lot of people are having trouble with ICE,” said Bhupendra.

Support in Noe

Clothing store Two Birds on Castro Street just off 24th Street put up a sign near its entrance. With one of his coworkers born overseas and now married to an American, store manager Delvon Brown said the shop embraced the message of support for immigrants. As for ICE, “I know they can’t come in without a [judicial] warrant,” said Brown, who has managed the boutique the past five years.

Brown said he had not encountered any ICE agents in the neighborhood. Still, he and his coworkers felt it was important to post the sign so that immigrants knew the store was a safe space. Reaction from customers has been overwhelmingly positive, said Brown.

“To be honest, it is about showing people visibility and that we are aware of the situation immigrants face,” said Brown. “We are insulated being in San Francisco. But just because we are in a bubble doesn’t mean we shouldn’t support Minnesota or speak up about the crazy things that are happening.”

ICE Isn’t Talking

Geiger admits he has no direct knowledge of any ICE visits in Noe Valley. But last month he attended an East Bay forum where a San Francisco BAR Association representative declared ICE agents were still going into commercial corridors in the city but were not actively trying to enter businesses. “What tends to be happening in San Francisco now is not that ICE is targeting businesses but they are seeking an individual person. They might wait outside the business for them,” said Geiger.

Meanwhile, the local activist group RUTA (Rise Up To Action) has added a “Business Know Your Rights” focus to its work defending immigrant rights. Like Geiger, RUTA members have been visiting local businesses to offer information.

A spokesperson for ICE did not respond to the Voice’s request for comment. In its year-end report for 2025, the agency claimed its officers “faced a 1,347% increase in assaults and an 8,000% increase in death threats against them, thanks to the lies and smears from sanctuary politicians and radical activists, and hoaxes spread by the media.”

Employees Have Rights

While ICE agents can lawfully be in a public space, they are limited in their access to certain spaces inside a business without a judicial warrant, said Geiger. Examples might be a storeroom of a retail store or behind the counter of an eatery or in its kitchen.

“Let’s say they are looking for somebody. If they don’t have a judicial warrant, they can’t go back there,” stressed Geiger. “If you are at the counter, you need to know that and to say that. It is important businesses know these things and know what their obligations are under California law.”

He advises employees to take the time to read a warrant if one is presented by an ICE agent and to make sure ICE has the correct information, such as a business address, and the warrant is signed by a judge.

“If they do, then they can go in. But if they don’t, they can’t,” Geiger said.

Employees also should know the phone number for the San Francisco Rapid Response Network, he said, so they can report an ICE visit. The 24-hour hotline is 415-200-1548.

Collective Power

Roughly 20 people attended the 20-minute presentation Geiger gave at the January meeting of the NVMPA, held at Novy Restaurant.

Geiger said he explained at the gathering that California recently passed a new state law that requires employers to inform their employees once a year of their rights, and that includes immigrant rights.

Another new law, notes Geiger, will allow employees to designate an emergency contact person, whom employers are required to call should the employee be arrested or detained while at the worksite.

Geiger points out that while preparing his talk he discovered a good resource: the “Know Your Rights” page at the East Bay Sanctuary Covenant website (eastbaysanctuary.org). It has information tailored for immigrants, allies, schools, and workplaces.

He hopes the merchants associations he’s meeting with will use their collective power to speak up for those who may not be able to speak for themselves, for fear of becoming a target of ICE.

“It is important for businesses to speak up on these issues, not only for their own interest but because it is the right thing to do,” said Geiger. “People are afraid, and not without reason. If an association speaks up, then individual members are shielded.”

Geiger credits not only Mayor Daniel Lurie but local business leaders with convincing President Donald Trump to halt a planned deployment of federal troops to San Francisco last October.

“It was their collective voice that had an impact,” said Geiger. ■

Catholic Church Declines Landmark Designation

Church at 100-117 Diamond St., in the Castro District. He argued that city officials should drop their efforts to landmark any church sites, as they would have little chance to succeed.

“Landmarking church properties in California has been settled for over 30 years, as a matter of case law and statutory law,” Christian said.

Church Votes Delayed

The oversight body postponed action on the church landmark proposals until its next meeting, on Feb. 4.

Commissioner Hans Baldauf said he was unfamiliar with the state court’s ruling and asked Deputy City Attorney Peter Miljanich to clarify the statute.

Miljanich responded that such a clarification should be deferred “to an offline setting.” But he addressed the matter in general terms:

“I will say today there are exemptions in state law for the landmark designation process and other historic resource protections on noncommercial property owned by religious organizations,” said Miljanich.

A Preventive Measure

District 8 Supervisor Rafael Mandelman had initiated the landmark process for the sites last fall, citing concerns that recently approved zoning changes allowing for more housing development across the city could put historic structures at risk.

In total, Mandelman had proposed 16 properties for landmark status. (For more detail, see “Landmark Status Eyed for Famous Church,” November 2025 Noe Valley Voice.)

Fourteen of them received unanimous 7–0 support from the preservation commission at the members’ January meeting.

They included residential properties at 102 Guerrero St. and 361 San Jose Ave., and the San Francisco Fire Department’s former Engine Company No. 13 at 1458 Valencia St.

Among several LGBTQ-related sites were the former home of the late B.A.R. founder Bob Ross (4200 20th St.) and the first location of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation (514–20 Castro St.).

The preservation body also voted to support landmarking for St. Matthew’s Lutheran Church (3281 16th St.), St. Nicholas Cathedral (Russian Orthodox, 2005 15th St.), and the historic former site of LGBTQ synagogue Sha’ar Zahav (220 Danvers St.).

The 14 are headed to the Board of Supervisors for final approval as city landmarks.

28 More Sites

In mid-January, Mandelman submitted requests to landmark an additional 28 properties across his supervisorial district.

Included among the new sites is the Noe Valley Ministry at 1021 Sanchez St., an 1888 Carpenter Gothic building designed by architect Charles Geddes.

Officials with the Noe Valley Ministry did not respond to Voice queries about whether the church would support landmark status.

In the new group also is Holy

Innocents Episcopal Church, the brown-shingled building at 455 Fair

Oaks St. It was designed by English immigrant Ernest Coxhead and built in 1890.

Mandelman said he planned to ask City Attorney David Chiu about the supervisors’ options for preserving religious sites.

“We don’t really want to be doing this over the opposition of property owners, so we have to figure this out,” Mandelman said.

Among the new houses that Mandelman proposed as landmarks are two Queen Anne–style Victorians: the Charles Katz Home at 1200 Dolores St., built in 1909, and the Shaughnessy House at 394 Fair Oaks St., constructed in 1900.

Also on the list are the P.F. Ferguson House at 2 Vicksburg St., an 1874 example of Stick-Eastlake design; and the former Firehouse No. 44 at 3816 22nd St., built in 1909.

The new landmark requests will be making their way through the city approval process later this spring. ■

Walking w/ Friends

restrictions were starting to lift. He and his wife Tess had recently moved to Noe Valley. “I thought it’d be interesting and fun to try and build community in the neighborhood,” says Nanda, a senior director of venture investing at Fundrise.

Nanda, now 31, still leads the walking group, and these days he’s bringing his 10-week-old son in a baby carriage.

Whereas initially the group walked up the hill on Valley or 28th Street to a lookout point on Noe Street at Duncan, they now keep to the relatively flat stretch of Sanchez.

Walking in a group offers the dual benefits of being physically active and socializing at the same time. Over the years, Noe Walks has attracted an intergenerational crowd, and some members have gone on to meet socially outside the group, says Nanda, adding that he always intended the group to be a steppingstone to meeting people.

A Way to Widen Your Circle

Richard Wei, a Polk Gulch resident, launched a meetup.com group in 2023 that provides a platform for people over age 55 who want to start or join walking groups in their San Francisco neighborhood. Wei, now 35, got the idea after experiencing the social disruption of the pandemic and his grandmother’s isolating experience with Alzheimer’s disease and her subsequent death around the same time.

Walking is great for easing anxiety, depression, and loneliness, Wei says.

“We grow more and more insular with technology, so it becomes a bigger and bigger burden to try to socialize—to get out there and allow our community to be that medicine,” says Wei, who cofounded a robotics engineering startup this year.

It Does the Body Good

The medical establishment is increasingly aware that walking is a great way to get exercise, says Noe Valley resident Robert Nied, MD.

Walking is probably the most common form of exercise and it’s certainly the most accessible, says Nied, who is chief of sports medicine at Kaiser Permanente San Francisco. “As little as 10 minutes, in terms of a round of physical activity, is beneficial, so just simply walking to places that you historically might have taken a car to is beneficial to your health,” Nied says.

If you walk regularly, you can expect improvements in blood pressure and other markers of cardiovascular health. To boost physical health benefits, Nied advises taking a brisk pace, for example doing a mile in 20 minutes. You want to walk relatively quickly, while still feeling comfortable enough to carry on a conversation, he says.

Nied also points out that if you live in Noe Valley, and if you’re able, you can walk to get most everything you need. Nied says he tries to do all of his errands on foot, including grocery shopping with a backpack, which helps him as a busy professional get his daily steps in.

For weight loss, you will want to build some weight training into your fitness regimen. But Nied does not advise wearing weights while walking, pointing out that the American College of Sports Medicine recommends doing strength training and cardio separately.

Glenn Shope, founder and senior trainer at MX3 Fitness, which operates four gyms in San Francisco, including one in Noe Valley (4045 24th St.), also recommends against wearing weights while walking. But he does routinely advise new members starting a weight-training program to incorporate regular walking separately.

“Walking lubricates your joints. It increases your bone density. It conditions your tendons. It increases the blood flow to cartilage, tendons, and ligaments,” Shope says.

For people who have been sedentary, Shope advises starting with 3,000 to 5,000 steps and building up within a few weeks to 10,000 steps per day—not to mention walking instead of driving. It’s 100 percent okay to start small and test your limits, Shope says.

Weight training is critical for maintaining muscle mass and a healthy body weight but you don’t have to go to extremes to get benefits.

“We’re not training to be athletes,” Shope says. “We’re training to be healthy human beings.”

Mind the Hills

With its many hills and stairs, Noe Valley is a great location for building intensity into your walk.

Nied says it’s best to start with shallow hills and walk at a steady pace. Take a moment at the bottom to prepare for ascent. Use a zigzag (aka “paper-boy”) pattern when going up, and on the way down, take really short steps to protect your knees.

Unless you have a known cardiovascular condition, like a prior heart attack or Type 2 diabetes, you probably don’t need to check with a doctor before starting to walk for fitness.

If you have health concerns, you can also self-screen by taking the global standard test: the Physical Activity Readiness Questionnaire for Everyone (PAR-Q+). Find it at epar.medrx.com.

Strength in Numbers

If you’re starting your own group, you may find it easier than you think. Based on his experience with Noe Walks, Nanda recommends putting up posters around the neighborhood, including on your planned walking route, although he also has a website (noewalks.com) and an Instagram account for the group.

“I work in tech, and so I thought that the tech piece would be the biggest way people would find [Noe Walks], but it turns out the old-school way was by far the biggest driver,” Nanda says.

You can chat with the owners of your local café, place posters there, and attract walking buddies by word of mouth. You can also post on Nextdoor or Facebook, or check the meetup.com website for walking events.

Designer Routes

Wei says he would almost approach it like online dating: Put together a post, with your picture, some interests, and hobbies, describe the route you want to take (the elevation), the expected pace (conversational), and mention where bathroom stops are. “Set the physical expectation so that people feel easier about signing up,” Wei says.

Nanda says there are opportunities at the end of the Noe Walks route to announce whether you are starting a new group or looking for walking partners. To join Noe Walks, just show up at 24th and Sanchez some Saturday morning at 10 a.m.

Wei says you can contact his meetup.com group for options using the platform to set something up in Noe Valley. He also advises that it’s okay to limit participation if you prefer a small-size group.

It may take a bit of time to get a group going. But Nanda and Wei stress the importance of being consistent and developing relationships over time.

If it turns out to be just you on the first walk you organize, don’t get discouraged. Carry on yourself—sans earbuds or any other electronic distractions—and if you run into a neighbor, strike up a conversation, Wei says.

“You might run into them at the grocery store later.” ■

Luxury Sales Lift Market

By Corrie M. Anders

A handful of high-end sales gave Noe Valley’s real estate market a late-year boost, as 18 single-family detached homes changed hands during November and December of 2025.

Condominium sales remained steady during the same two-month period, according to data supplied to the Voice by Corcoran Icon Real Estate.

For both houses and condos, most of the activity took place before Thanksgiving.

“November was really good,” said Christine Lopatowski, manager of Corcoran Icon’s 24th Street office. “People were listing their properties at the last minute before the holidays.” By the same measure, she added, “buyers were anxious to get into their homes and start the new year in their new property.”

How hot was the market?

All 14 detached homes in November sold at or above their asking price, and buyers typically made offers in two weeks’ time. Eight of the 14 closed escrow within 20 days and were “likely all cash deals,” Lopatowski said, noting that mortgage financing usually required 30 to 45 days.

Several luxury sales helped push home prices higher. Two homes sold for more than $7 million, while two others topped $6 million, driving the average sale price to $3.8 million. (The last time the average hit that level was in May 2024.)

The priciest sale in November was a six-bedroom, six-bath home in the 500 block of 28th Street, between Castro and Diamond streets, which sold for its asking price of $7.5 million. Built in 1910, the home had been renovated and enlarged to four stories and 4,785 square feet of living space in 2019. Amenities included an elevator, a gourmet kitchen with Sub-Zero and Wolf appliances, a sculptural light-filled staircase, air conditioning, solar panels, two terraces, a roof deck with panoramic views, and two-car parking.

Close behind was the off-market sale of a $7.2 million home in the 100 block of Jersey Street between Vicksburg and Sanchez streets. Originally built in 1900, the residence was redesigned in 2015 with a modern façade and four bedrooms and five baths in 3,720 square feet of living space. Features included accordion glass walls, multiple skylights, a floating staircase, a chef’s kitchen with a waterfall island, radiant heat, smart-home technology, a wine cellar and wet bar, and spaces for five cars.

December’s most expensive detached-home sale was a remodeled Queen Anne Victorian in the 400 block of Clipper Street between Castro and Diamond streets. A buyer paid $4.85 million for the four-bedroom, 3-5 bath home, with 3,157 square feet of living space. Among its highlights were solar panels, a formal dining room, a chef’s kitchen with a marble waterfall island and family room opening to a south-facing yard, two custom wet bars, media room, and a two-car garage with EV charging.

In the condominium market, November’s top sale was a three-bedroom, two-bath unit in the 800 block of Douglass Street between 24th and Jersey streets, which sold for $1,725,000. The 1,200-square-foot home shared a 1908 Edwardian building that had been remodeled while retaining “lots of its original details,” Lopatowski said.

December’s highest-priced condo sold for $1.85 million. The three-bedroom, two-bath unit occupied two levels in a Victorian renovated in 2020 in the 4000 block of Cesar Chavez Street between Sanchez and Noe streets. Its main attractions were wide-plank wood floors, Bosch appliances, floor-to-ceiling glass, and a private roof deck with views of Noe Valley and Twin Peaks. ■

Growing the Garden Tour

The Noe Valley Garden Tour is turning 20 in 2026—and organizers are celebrating the milestone by digging deep.

For the first time, Friends of Noe Valley will team up with Friends of Slow Sanchez to highlight gardens along Sanchez Street, as well as on nearby blocks between Noe and Church streets. The result promises to be “extra fabulous,” says co-organizer Peggy Cling, and will offer live music, gardener talks, a plant swap, and Friends of the Urban Forest advice.

The event will take place on Saturday, May 16, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Proceeds will support beautification projects along Slow Sanchez.

But this month and next, Cling and co-organizer Linda Lockyer are looking for eight to 10 gardens to feature in the tour. “If you have a cozy back yard, a blooming front stoop, a brand new or a well-established garden, or a kid- or dog-friendly spot, we’d be happy to have you,” says Cling. “Any type of garden is acceptable, and submissions are now open.”

To schedule a garden visit from Cling or Lockyer or to get more information, email Lockyer at lindalockyer3@gmail.com.

Forum on Trump’s Record on the Environment

As part of its ongoing speaker series at the Noe Valley Ministry, the group Town Square Democracy, in partnership with Indivisible SF, will hold a free community forum on “Trump vs. the Environment: Climate Science and Health Under Attack,” on Monday, Feb. 23, from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The evening, in the upstairs hall at 1021 Sanchez St., will include reports “from the front lines” by four environmental experts: John Balmes, physician-scientist and emeritus professor of medicine and environmental health (UCSF and UC Berkeley); Ellie Cohen, CEO of The Climate Center and a leader in climate-smart conservation solutions; ecologist/educator Tania Pollak, a former faculty lecturer at SFSU and current planner at the Golden Gate National Parks Conservancy and the Presidio Trust; and environmental lawyer Cliff Rechtschaffen, an adjunct professor at Berkeley Law (UC), a state energy and environmental impact adviser at NYU Law, and a member of the California Air Resources Board.

The experts will assess the President’s impact on the environment and invite audience discussion on ways to respond.

“The Trump Administration is destroying our climate change research in the United States,” warns marine ecologist and forum co-organizer Jim Harvey. “Please join us in alerting the public to the threats to health, science, the judiciary, immigrants, and our democracy.”

The February event is the 11th community meeting or political action sponsored by Town Square Democracy since its formation last year. Says co-organizer Lisa Jaicks, “Our most recent gathering, which examined the assault on research and health, was hugely successful with over 100 attendees.”

Memoirs With Local Magic

Two Noe Valley authors (and friends)—Jan Sollish and Jackie Davis Martin—are getting together to host a book party at Bird & Beckett Books in Glen Park on Wednesday, March 4, at 7 p.m. Each will read excerpts from their works.

Jan Sollish’s book, Simply Magical, is a memoir of the “magical” life she led in San Francisco in the 1970s as a La Bamba dancer for Beach Blanket Babylon by night and a Catholic school kindergarten teacher by day.

Jackie Davis Martin’s book, A Life, Fictively, is a collection of short stories, many published separately in literary journals. Though the stories parallel her life in their chronology and settings, and sometimes in their characters, Davis Martin describes them as “fictive,” or fictional.

Both books will be for sale at (and by) the bookstore, located at 653 Chenery St. Everyone is invited.

The Town Square, Amplified

Noe Valley Town Square events coordinator Leslie Crawford reports she is bounding into spring with some big events at the park on 24th Street between Vicksburg and Sanchez.

“One of our biggest,” Crawford says, “will be Noe Valley’s Big Game Watch Party,” on Sunday, Feb. 8, from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m. (Yes, it’s the one with the Patriots, the Seahawks, and Bad Bunny, but due to trademark restrictions, SF Rec and Park cannot use the word that rhymes with duper.)

The square, at 3861 24th St. near Sanchez, will have a big-screen TV, and there will be pizza and beer, plus contests and games on the sidelines. “This gives Noe Valleyans a chance to come together in our ‘living room’ and watch the game together and, for those with younger kids, have them run around a bit and play,” says Crawford. “Bring lawn chairs!”

The other big news for 2026, Crawford says, is that the Town Square has won permission to amplify music at its Sunday afternoon concerts, “within moderation, to be considerate of neighbors. This will broaden our range of what we can offer.”

The Sunday in the Square concerts, which are 1 to 3 p.m. on two Sundays a month, and run the gamut from solo musicians to rock or jazz bands.

Set to perform on Feb. 1, according to music director Gil Guillermo, were Latin and R&B performer Johnny Escobedo (1 p.m.) and singer-songwriter Alie Halla and violinist Nina Violina (2 p.m.)

The lineup for Sunday, Feb. 15, included folk-jazz singer-songwriter Amy Obenski, whose latest original is “Watch How We Breathe” (1 p.m.) and café jazz duo Jackson Moran and Nathaniel Vincent (2 p.m.).

Crawford also notes that a new activity—actually it’s a 4,000-year-old Chinese practice—is now filling the square on two Thursdays a month from 8 to 9 a.m. (Feb. 5 and 19): qigong. The gentle movement, which involves slow stretching, breath, and meditation, is aimed at balancing life’s energy (“qi”). Just like the Saturday morning Noe Valley Farmers Market (8 a.m. to 1 p.m.), and Sunday morning yoga (11 a.m. to noon all except Feb. 8), the qigong is free and beginners are welcome.

The last big event in February is the Noe Valley Night Market, on Tuesday, Feb. 24, from 5 to 8 p.m. It’s always been amplified—because people love hearing Lambert Moss sing jazz and pop classics while they graze the retail,

At the Feb. 15 Sunday Music in the Square concert, singer-songwriter Amy Obenski (top) will play her cool, emotionally evocative music from 11 to 2 p.m., then be followed by hot club jazz players Nathaniel Vincent (left) and Jackson Moran from 2 to 3 p.m. Photos courtesy Gil Guillermo art, and food concessions.

Roam Rancho San Miguel

The group Shaping San Francisco is leading a Noe Valley History Walk on Saturday, March 7, that will take hikers from Billy Goat Hill to Fairmount Heights to the east side of Twin Peaks.

“We walk along sites of former dairies and quarries, through early and modernist residential developments, along Slow Streets and up and down staircases,” say the guides, who may be one or the other of Shaping San Francisco’s co-directors (Chris Carlsson and LisaRuth Elliott) or one of the many fans of their 28-year-old community history project.

Reservations are required for the walk, which starts at noon at the Noe Valley/Sally Brunn Library at 451 Jersey St. and roams the hills of Rancho San Miguel till 3 p.m. “Be prepared for steep slopes and great views.”

And bring water and a snack. “We don’t stop for food!”

The event is free (donations accepted). RSVP to shaping@foundsf.org or call the library at 415-355-5707.

You can learn about other history walks, including a Presidio to Mission Dolores Walk (Feb. 21), a tour of the Northeast Industrial Mission (May 9), and a Wide Open Town Walk covering the 20th-century San Francisco of gay men and women (May 16), at shapingsf.org or by calling 415-881-7579. Oh, and the group is known for its bicycle and boat tours.

STORE TREK

Store Trek is a regular feature of the Voice, highlighting new stores and restaurants in Noe Valley. This month, we profile a coffee and sandwich shop on Dolores Street that recently changed its name to be more inviting.

U AND I COFFEE AND SANDWICH SHOP
1300 Dolores Street (at 26th Street)

Marking its two-year anniversary this month is U and I Coffee and Sandwich Shop, located in a residential building at 1300 Dolores Street, at the corner of Dolores and 26th streets. The neighborhood eatery is popular with police officers, firefighters, and construction workers, many of whom pop in to pick up to-go orders.

Now, co-owner Sameera Madhigi is looking to boost foot traffic from residents in the area. She rebranded the business in mid-December, giving it the longer U and I name to better reflect its mission.

The business first opened on Feb. 6, 2024, as the SF Gourmet Boutique. That moniker confused customers, Madhigi told the Voice, and even caused a few to wonder whether the shop was a clothing boutique.

“No one understood we were a coffee shop and sold sandwiches,” she said.

To Madhigi, the letters in the new name refer to more than the inclusive “you and I.” They are the initials of her nephews Uthman and Idrees, and a reminder of how families and friends can come together to cook and share a meal. Her sister, who is a silent partner in the business, suggested the name last fall.

“It was perfect. I immediately wanted it for the new name,” said Madhigi. “It is cute. People can say let’s go to U and I, that little shop.”

Madhigi is the sole employee at the shop, which is open for breakfast and lunch seven days a week. She uses Illy coffee beans, with a 12 oz. cup of drip coffee offered for $4 and a 16 oz. for $4.50.

A hit with customers is her Matcha Latte (12 oz., $5.50; 16 oz., $6), which can also be made iced (12 oz., $6.50; 16 oz., $7.50).

A popular breakfast item is the Avocado Amor, an open-faced sandwich made with avocado, tomatoes, arugula, dill, and feta cheese on toasted sourdough drizzled with a fig balsamic glaze ($12). There is also the Bonjour Bagel, toasted and served with cream cheese ($6).

When ordering sandwiches, customers inside the shop use the sheets on the counter to the left of the deli case to check off their choices of meat—such as smoked turkey, pastrami, roast beef, or tuna—and/or cheese, vegetables, or condiments. The sandwiches can be made on rye, French, wheat, Dutch crunch, or sourdough bread. Cold sandwiches cost $14 and hot ones $15.

“The hot pastrami sandwich is our number-one seller,” said Madhigi, who resides in the East Bay city of Hercules.

The breads—along with an assortment of pastries, from croissants and scones to bear claws and muffins—are delivered fresh daily from City Baking Co.

Atop the deli case at U and I is a menu board with specialty sandwiches; it changes roughly every three months. Currently it features Le Belle Lox ($12), an open-faced sandwich made with smoked salmon, cream cheese, dill, tomatoes, onions, and capers on toasted sourdough.

Le Café Egg ($12) is made with egg, pesto, mozzarella cheese, tomato, and mayo on softer ciabatta bread. The Méditerranéen ($12) is a veggie pita sandwich stuffed with hummus, tomatoes, cucumber, feta, arugula, and olives.

“The Méditerranéen wrap—people love that,” said Madhigi.

The shop also carries various candies, chips, and beverages, including sodas from Dad’s, Frostie, and Saranac ($2.99). It also has Coca-Cola and various bottled water brands.

An assortment of Rock Candy sugar sticks can be found on one wall of shelving, along with boxes of Bit-O-Honey, Whoppers, Sugar Babies, and Charleston Chew. By the register is a box of Moon Pies in vanilla, salted caramel, banana, and chocolate flavors.

“We just like to add things that a lot of businesses in the area don’t carry, a lot of nostalgic things,” said Madhigi.

She and her sister used to own a grocery store in Vallejo, which they sold to a family member. They decided their next venture would be to open a small cafe in San Francisco. Driving through the city one day, they spotted the vacant Dolores Street storefront for rent.

It once housed the coffeeshop Luv a Java, which closed in 2021. The siblings signed the lease for the 850-square-foot retail space in 2023 and gave it a complete remodel with new tiles and deli equipment.

“We really like Noe Valley. Noe Valley is really beautiful,” said Madhigi, adding they also liked the fact that the location was a bit off the beaten path. “We didn’t want any competition around us, so we thought it would be the perfect place.”

While the business launched in the winter two years ago, selling packaged goods, the deli didn’t open until May 22, 2024. Madhigi told the Voice she wanted to invite Mayor Daniel Lurie to stop by in hopes he might do a social media post about the business and help attract more customers.

“It is going good, but it could be better,” she said.

There is no seating inside or outside, Madhigi noted, because the shop’s bathroom is too small to meet current zoning requirements for public use.

“Hopefully, in the future we are going to try to see what we can do [to enlarge the bathroom] when business gets a bit better,” said Madhigi.

For now, customers looking for a place to eat their sandwiches can head to Juri Commons Park a short walk away at 26th and Guerrero streets. It has bench seating for enjoying breakfast or lunch outdoors.

U and I Coffee and Sandwich Shop is open daily from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Chicken Wild Rice Soup at Trad Bone Broth

Has there ever been a more perfect pairing than warm chicken soup and a rainy day?

A recommendation that I try the Chicken Wild Rice Soup at Trad Bone Broth (3903 24th St.) came my way at the Noe Valley Voice holiday party, held a day before San Francisco’s Dec. 19–20 “atmospheric river.”

Local music icon Ben Fong-Torres tipped me off to the dish, and I’m very glad he did. I hadn’t realized that Trad offered meal-ready soups, and this one, priced at $22 for a quart of soup, immediately made an impression.

I sometimes write about indulgent dishes that favor pleasure over prudence. This is not one of those cases. The ingredients here are clean, comforting, and genuinely delicious. I even added a pinch of salt, but don’t tell my doctor.

The soup features a savory chicken broth, pasture-raised chicken, wild rice, carrots, onions, and herbs. The shop even includes a bit of parsley on the side, a small thoughtful addition. The chicken is tender and flavorful, and the wild rice is as unprocessed as it gets: pleasantly chewy, hearty, and structured in a way that adds texture and contrast to the broth.

The carrots bring a bit of color that rounds everything out.

Adding to the feel-good factor, the soup is served in a large mason jar—no microplastics, no nonsense (though you can also bring your own container). Note: The mason jar is sold separately at $2.

If you’re looking for something that will keep you warm, satisfied, and feeling virtuous during our cooler months, this is an excellent option. In fact, the soup was so comforting and balanced that I happily went back for three bowls while researching this article.

UPPER NOE RECREATION CENTER

Chris Faust of Friends of Upper Noe Recreation Center reports:

Winter Session began Jan. 6 with expanded hours and rainy weather. But clear sunny skies arrived the second week. That’s good. The park is now closing later, at 9 p.m., on weekdays.

The new Upper Noe Gardening Group met twice in late January to survey the park’s gardens and to plan workdays. The members look forward to preparing the grounds for spring and taking part in the Noe Valley Garden Tour. Meetings are on Saturday mornings. Want to help or learn more about it? Email info@uppernoerecreationcenter.com.

New activities at the gym include Wrestling Camp, Coed Boxing, and Women’s Boxing. Advanced Drop-In Volleyball has returned on Wednesday evenings, despite a previous notice that it would not. View the 2026 Winter Catalog and registration information at <https://sfrecpark.org/DocumentCenter/View/27791/Winter-Catalog> Web.

Park staff is asking that parents monitor sandbox use and ensure that sand is not carried and dumped in other parts of the playground. The sand is becoming depleted from the box as it is dispersed across the new turf surface. Unlike the previous rubber surface which allowed for the sand to be easily blown back into the box, the turf is more challenging to maintain.

Equipment for pickleball, ping-pong, and other activities is available. Call the Upper Noe Rec Center office, 295 Day St., at 415-970-8061. For more information, check out the website: www.uppernoerecreationcenter.com.

Friends of Upper Noe Recreation Center is the stewardship group for the rec center and field. Get involved. Contact office personnel and/or San Francisco Customer Service (3-1-1) to improve conditions and keep the park healthy. If you see something out of place, say something.

For issues related to Joby’s Dog Run, open 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., call 3-1-1 or email info@fundogsf.org.

MORE BOOKS TO READ

Reading Is a Good Escape

A good book can take you away from the chaos of the real world. May we show you something in a new title from the Noe Valley/Sally Brunn Library, courtesy of Children's Librarian Madeleine Felder, Youth Librarian Cristal Fiel, and Adult Services Librarian Amy Lewis?

Once again, we thank them for sharing their latest in books and films. To put items on hold, visit sfpl.org or download the app at sfpl.org/services/mobile-resources/library-catalog-mobile-apps/.

Want to come back to Earth? Walk to the historic building at 451 Jersey St., and sit on the deck. If you need to speak with Lewis, Felder, or Fiel, ask at the library or call 415-355-5707. We've been told that branch manager Mary Fobbs-Guillory is on leave—we hope for just a short while. We miss her. Please note all city libraries will be closed on Feb. 16, Presidents Day.

Meanwhile, help me thank my Deputy Chief, April Fools Consultant, and Bookworm, of course (for only about 50 years here at the Noe Valley Voice!): Karol Barske. She composes the book descriptions and makes us smile with little drawings like this one.

—Sally Smith, ed.

Still Turning 2026

By Mazook

HAPPY NEW YEAR: There's a lot to catch up on since we left you in December. National news was centered on the horrifying ICE tactics, making it not a very happy January for the 97 percent of Noe Valley voters who cast ballots for someone other than Trump in the 2024 election. Hopefully, we will have our say in the mid-terms.

BEST-DRESSED WINDOWS: Downtown Noe Valley stores via the Noe Valley Merchants and Professionals Association held a contest in December for the best holiday decorations in their front windows. They were viewed and rated by a group of local judges. Contest organizer Dave Karraker of MX3 Fitness announced the winners like so:

"Drum roll, please! We have the winners for the 2025 Noe Valley Windows & Parklets Holiday Decorating Competition. Competition this year was very tough, with an increase in the number of windows with holiday flair over last year (yay!).

"Bringing home the golden trophy and prize package for Most Festive was Noe's Nest Bed and Breakfast with their elaborate display. Most Fun went to Mio Mio Salon, which featured a huge amount of creativity and whimsy. And in our closest contest, Trad Bone Broth beat out Moonshot Studio by a single point to bring home the award for Most San Francisco."

Karraker thanked the many businesses that provided prizes for the winners, including Just for Fun, Easy Breezy, TressWorks, Wink, Novy, MX3 Fitness, Perfectly Seasoned, Small Frys, When Modern Was, Trad Bone Broth, and Mio Mio Salon."

The judges were Karraker, Holly Reeves of RGH Designs, Merchants Association president Kristen McCaffery, Noe Valley Town Square chief Leslie Crawford, and Noe Valley Voice leader (and my esteemed editor) Sally Smith.

NOE WILL BE TELEVISED: Teresa Fitzgerald, owner of the aforementioned Moonshot Studio, tells me that Moonshot was featured on ABC/KRON4's LIVE! in the Bay daytime TV show on Jan. 9. During an approximately five-minute custom candle-making demonstration, she mentioned the store's Noe Valley location in her introductory comments. You can watch it online—just Google "Moonshot Jan. 9 KRON4" and the video will pop up.

Says Fitzgerald, "It was my second time on the show (July 2023 was the first), sharing the fun and creativity of scent-blending and custom candle-making with their audience, and another terrific experience with a very professional production staff."

NOTHING BUT FUN can be found these days at the Dolores Deluxe deli/café at the corner of 22nd and Dolores. The place is hosting jazz concerts and food popups, and they're also doing a podcast airing news and interviews with local chefs.

In December, the judges in the Noe Valley Windows & Parklets Holiday Decorating Competition—including (l-r) Dave Karraker, Holly Reeves, Kristen McCaffery, and Leslie Crawford—set about picking the winners. It wasn't easy to choose in the Most San Francisco category, but Trad Bone Broth showed it wanted the prize. Photos by Sally Smith and Corrie M. Anders

11 a.m. to 2 p.m., and then again on Feb. 19 and Feb. 26 (4 to 7 p.m.). Next, there's Gax SF Burgers' pop-up on Saturday, Feb. 21, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Corner Sessions jazz concert is on Sunday, Feb. 22, from 11 to 3 p.m.

In March, you could try the Okkon Japanese Fusion popup (March 11, noon-4 p.m.) or Tacos El Gran Mac (March 8, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.).

All the events are listed on DoloresDeluxe.com, even the Forever Neighbor Podcast, hosted by the deli's chef/owner Ramzi Budayr.

GAMES PEOPLE PLAY: Live old-school Bar Bingo games started in December at The Dubliner (3838 24th). They happen on Wednesdays from 8 to 10 p.m. And the bar's Trivia Night continues on Tuesdays, 8 to 10 p.m. Prizes may range from a pint of beer and tee shirts to key chains, and bottle openers.

Noe Valley organizer Andrew Keeler ("Mister Mahjong") says Mamahuhu (3991 24th) is attracting crowds to the mahjong on Mondays, from 6 to 9 p.m. Players play a choice of Chinese and American-style games, both inside and outside the restaurant. Search for "Mahjong Monday Drop-in at Mamahuhu Noe Valley."

On the food front, after nearly four years as an elegant indoor restaurant, chef Tracy Goh's Damansara (11781 Church) has switched from dine-in to to-go. It will be all takeout so that its menu of Malaysian, Singaporean, Indonesian, Thai, Chinese, Indian, and Burmese cuisine will be more affordable.

The Slow Sanchez community group tells us what to expect in 2026 in its latest newsletter. They have a $5,000 grant application to SF Beautiful to add "vegetated planters" in the bulb-out area of Sanchez and Day streets. They are also busy creating sidewalk gardens to help neighbors add permanent greenery along Sanchez.

Don't miss the Slow Sanchez Happy Hour at Noe Cafe (11299 Sanchez) on Friday, Feb. 27, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

And don't forget this: In February, Firefly (4288 24th) holds its annual public school fundraiser, where it donates 20 percent of the cost of your food and beverage to your favorite San Francisco public school. "All you have to do is come in for dinner on any Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday, and mention your school of choice to your server," the restaurant says. Reservations may be made at fireflysf.com.

HEAR'S TO YOU: Born and raised in Noe Valley, Jessica Limer Flores has become famous worldwide as a deaf-awareness rights advocate. Her mom, Christina Marie Flores (now) Bradley, has been a longtime friend of mine. Our kids played together at Martha's Coffee on Church Street back in the 1990s. I often meet her while she is on her daily walk in Downtown Noe Valley. Christina proudly points out that "Jessica is from a family that is four generations Noe." She was born in 1988.

When I saw Christina recently, she told me some exciting news: Jessica, who is also an artist, improviser, comedian, and YouTuber, is playing a patient in several episodes of season two of The Pitt, which premiered on Max (now HBO Max) in January a year ago. The series is described as "a medical procedural drama... that follows an emergency department staff as they attempt to overcome the hardships of a single 15-hour work shift at the fictional Pittsburgh Trauma Medical Center, all while having to navigate staff shortages and underfunding." The show is huge—it just won Best TV Series-Drama at the Golden Globes.

Jessica Flores is also featured in an ABC-7 TV News interview from April 3, 2024 (but it's still streaming online, so you can easily find it by googling).. One part includes a Flores home video. "When she was a girl," the narrator says, "Jessica Flores was among a group of children singing holiday songs at a church in San Francisco. In the video her father recorded, you can see as she struggles to keep up with the singing but couldn't understand why...." The message Flores tries to convey in the interview is that society should try to detect and treat hearing problems as early as possible.

Jessica "Limer" Flores, known also as @YoJessicaFlores, chats and signs with others who are deaf via her own live streams on YouTube and other media. She is truly inspiring.

I am now and have always been a proud Noe Valleone.

A PROUD PROTEST: Running Wylder, Omnivore Books, Bones Bagels, and Firefly restaurant were among the many local businesses that participated in the one-day "no work, no school, and no shopping" nationwide strike Friday, Jan. 30, to protest Trump's immigration policies and express their outrage over the killings in Minnesota.

When the Voice checked with her afterwards, Celia Sack of Omnivore said, "Remember when America was proud to be a melting pot of people from all over the world? We decided to close during the National General Strike in solidarity with the citizens (and non-citizens) of Minneapolis, who are under siege by goons who believe America is better off without immigrants."

"I asked my staff how they felt about us closing. I told them I would still pay them, but I asked would they want to close even if I didn't? It was a unanimous yes. We are a small shop, and losing a day's sales is not easy, but that is the definition of sacrifice.

"It was well worth it to take a stand, because immigrants are what makes America great."

YOU AUTO KNOW about a big-time local car crash. On my daily walk on Jan. 26, I climbed the 150 stairs on the 22nd Street hill from Church Street. It is the 11th steepest hill in San Francisco, with warnings to vehicle drivers at its crest at Vicksburg.

On the south side of the block, I saw the remains of an auto crash. The car had been towed away but lots of metal and broken glass remained, along with cement chunks and other signs of damage to the sidewalk and nearby residences.

When I reached the top, I met a fellow walking who said he lived close to the crest. "What happened?" I asked.

He told me that at about 11 a.m. he was awakened by his house shaking like an earthquake. "When I went outside to see what was happening, I saw the crest of the hill was blocked by police vehicles, with red lights flashing and police officers with guns drawn pointing down the hill. I went back to my house."

Apparently, the police were chasing a car turning east on Sanchez driven by someone not familiar with the huge drop of the road. They flew halfway down the hill, crashing into the steps and the fronts of several houses on the hill.

The next morning at Martha's, I encountered two police officers from Mission Station. I asked them what happened. They told me they were both off the past two days, but "it was the talk of the station," and they said I should call and ask.

I did and asked to talk to the captain or a lieutenant about the incident. An officer called me back in the afternoon and not surprisingly told me, "We are aware of that matter, and it is currently under investigation."

Hopefully I can talk to some of the property owners and give you an update in next month's Voice.

SAD NOTES: Sorry to see that Terrasol, at 1307 Castro, may be closing or has closed. "It's shutting its doors after two decades in San Francisco" was the word from one of its longtime fans. "It's the end of an era for the charming boutique Terrasol. The owners, Stephen and Alberto, filled the shop with the most quirky and fun stuff, celebrating all holidays and special occasions. The shop is closing at the end of January. Let's shop and help them clear out the store!"

Also just heard about the passing of Larry Reed, a theater director with international fame. He died Jan. 30 at his longtime home on Chattanooga Street. Reed was a multi-talented artist best known as the founder of ShadowLight Productions. He created amazing shadow theater with puppets, cutouts, and live actors. Larry's shows, many at the Noe Valley Ministry, delighted adults and children alike. He was 81. We will miss him.

THAT'S ALL, FOLKS. See you as we march toward March. And don't forget to register to vote.
